

I feel that the first premise is that my phone number grants access into in my home. I have the absolute right to privacy, to not be disturbed by unwanted callers.

This is analagous to some person who is soliciting door to door and walks into my home without having permission just because I have a front door that may be unlocked.

Free speach is not a valid contention here because it is my right to privacy that is paramount. If free speach is their argument then they have the option of going to some public place and make their "speach".